Introduction

The New Jersey Early Hearing Detection and Intervention Program (NJ EHDI), in the New Jersey Department of Health and Senior Services, is pleased to provide you with The New Jersey Pediatric Hearing Health Care Directory. The purpose of this resource manual is to assist parents and professionals in locating a variety of pediatric audiologic and hearing aid dispensing facilities throughout the State. The NJ EHDI Program is dedicated to ensuring early detection of childhood hearing loss and aims to improve access to newborn hearing health care services for all children in New Jersey.

Please note that the information contained in this directory was obtained from the providers in response to a survey. Thus the information on each provider was provided by the provider itself. All providers which chose to respond to the survey and which requested inclusion are listed in this manual. A listing in this directory in no way is to imply the endorsement of the included providers.

The New Jersey EHDI program was established in 2002 in response to passage of New Jersey's universal newborn hearing screening legislation (P.L. 2001, Chapter 373 and N.J.S.A. 26:2:2-103.9). The law and corresponding rules aim to ensure universal hearing screening of all infants born in New Jersey by one month of age (preferably prior to nursery discharge); complete audiologic evaluation for infants who do not pass newborn hearing screening by three months of age; enrollment of children into an appropriate, family-centered, culturally competent early intervention program no later than six months of age; and periodic audiologic monitoring of children who passed their newborn hearing screening, but who present with risk indicators for possible late-onset hearing loss. Many federal agencies, including the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), the National Institutes of Health (NIH), the Joint Committee on Infant Hearing (JCIH), and Healthy People 2010 support these goals.

Hearing loss is considered the most common health condition screened for in the newborn period. National data suggests that the incidence of bilateral congenital hearing loss is one to six children per thousand with even higher estimates noted when including infants and children who present with unilateral hearing loss, fluctuating hearing loss or late-onset hearing loss. Left undetected, hearing loss in infants can delay speech and language acquisition, academic achievement and social and emotional development. The most important time for a child to be exposed to and learn language is in the first three years of life. Studies have shown that enrollment of children with hearing loss in early intervention services during the first six months of life can improve language development and academic performance at levels comparable to their normally hearing peers by three to five years of age. In addition, when parents and children communicate effectively with each other from the onset of hearing loss identification, a foundation for language acquisition (both spoken and signed language) is established and language delays may be prevented or minimized. Provision of these services in a timely manner will help ensure that all children with hearing loss acquire communication and language skills that will last a lifetime.

Presently there are sixty-three hospitals with maternity units throughout New Jersey with approximately 115,000 infants born each year. While 99% of all infants born in New Jersey undergo at least one hearing screening prior to nursery discharge, about 4% require re-screening and/or audiologic evaluation.

Without appropriate follow-up and intervention, the true value of screening newborns for hearing loss cannot be achieved. Hospitals, pediatricians, audiologists and parents/caregivers are in need of easy access to a statewide resource directory that can provide information as to where infants can go for follow-up services. In addition to having access to a comprehensive resource that tells parents and professionals where to find the hearing screening/audiologic assessment and hearing aid fitting services they need, there is also a need for a directory that has special considerations including a listing of insurance carriers, availability of interpreting services and accessibility for disabled individuals. That resource guide is now in your hands provided by the NJ EHDI Program through the cooperation of licensed audiologists and hearing aid dispensers throughout New Jersey who responded to the EHDI Program's Hearing Health Care Directory survey. We hope this directory assists you in locating appropriate pediatric hearing health care services throughout the state and sets all New Jersey's infants and children on the way to receiving early hearing detection and intervention services.

This resource is available both in print and online and will be updated on a regular basis to allow for inclusion of new pediatric hearing health care facilities as well as additions to currently listed facilities to reflect increased pediatric services and/or changes to insurance providers or other information. In addition to ensuring that the medical home is made aware of newborn hearing screening results/recommendations, parents should be given comprehensive, culturally and linguistically appropriate information regarding their child's screening results and the importance of timely and complete audiologic follow-up. Parents also should be provided with resource information to guide them to facilities which offer pediatric audiology services.

Description of the Directory

Reference in this directory to any specific service or facility does not constitute an endorsement or recommendation by the New Jersey Department of Health and Senior Services. The Department is not responsible for the accuracy of the information listed since it was provided by each facility. This information is subject to change.

About the Survey

The information in this directory was obtained through a variety of sources. The NJ EHDI Program sent a direct mailing to all licensed audiologists and hearing aid dispensers in the State of New Jersey. The survey was initially mailed to 603 audiologists and hearing aid dispensers. A total of 326 audiologists and hearing aid dispensers responded to the survey. Of the 326 that responded, 65 declined to be listed in the directory because they do not service children or are not currently practicing.

About the Directory

The information in this directory was provided to the EHDI Program by the individual providers. The directory is arranged alphabetically by county and then by facility name. Each entry includes: address(es) of facility, TTY/voice phone number, fax number, website, e-mail address, insurance carriers accepted by the facility, hearing screening and diagnostic audiologic services, hearing aid dispensers, hearing aid services, bone anchored hearing aid services, levels of audiologic services, cochlear implant services, available languages, and facility accessibility. One or more of these items may be excluded from entries due to missing or incomplete information. Due to constant changes in medical insurance and types of services offered, please verify the provider meets your needs prior to scheduling appointments.

How to Use the Directory

To find a facility near you, just look up your county and identify a facility in your city or township or one that is closest to you. Before selecting a facility, compare the services and features that are important to you. If there is a particular facility you have in mind, but do not know what county it is located in, see the first index immediately following the listings, where all participating facilities are listed together in alphabetical order. If you are looking for a particular facility level, service provided, insurance accepted or language spoken, see the second index that groups facilities by the types of services, insurance, etc. If you are looking for a facility based on insurance coverage, it is always recommended that when you call to make the appointment, you double check that the facility currently accepts your insurance. Also, you should check with your health insurance company, by calling the number on the back of your insurance card, to make sure that your child is covered for the services/procedures that will be performed.

Facility Level Designation

A complete diagnostic audiologic evaluation of infants and toddlers requires specialized equipment, expertise, and interest. In New Jersey, audiologic assessment must be performed by appropriately credentialed and qualified audiologists who possess a current American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA) Certificate of Clinical Competence and have a valid New Jersey state license. Audiologists who provide assessment and management of infants and children with hearing loss must have the knowledge, skill, and instrumentation necessary for use with current pediatric hearing assessment methods and also knowledge and skill with hearing aid selection and evaluation procedures.

Facilities that lack the necessary expertise and/or equipment should establish consortial arrangements with those that do. In accordance with the proposed Joint Committee on Infant Hearing (JCIH) 2005 Position Statement and modeled after an established system developed by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, facilities offering pediatric audiologic assessment services are categorized by the level of testing that each administers.

Physicians and parents should contact these sites before making their child's appointment to ensure that the services they need for follow-up are available for each individual child's needs. Several birthing hospitals within New Jersey offer families the opportunity to return to their facilities for screening and re-screening services prior to one month of age. Inquiries regarding the availability of such services should be directed to the facility where the infant was born. Please note that infants who did not pass an Auditory Brainstem Response (ABR) screening prior to nursery discharge optimally should be re-screened with an ABR as an outpatient. Infants who do not pass an otoacoustic emission (OAE) or an ABR screening as an outpatient should be referred for a pediatric audiologic evaluation to include a diagnostic ABR study.

Levels* of facilities offering pediatric audiologic evaluation services are defined as follows:

*Facilities that do not offer all services for any given level noted below, will be listed separately indicating specific services available at that site.

Level One: Serve children birth to 3 years of age. Audiology services at these facilities include sedated and nonsedated Auditory Brainstem Response (ABR) testing in addition to other traditional pediatric test procedures

- ❖ Auditory evoked response threshold using frequency-specific signals by air and bone conduction with appropriate equipment procedures and personnel for medically monitored sedation during testing (in addition, may include ASSR measures)
- ❖ Testing in a calibrated soundfield

- ❖ Visual Reinforcement Audiometry (VRA) (in addition, may also include Tangible Reinforcement Operant Conditioning (TROCA) and/or Visually Reinforced Operant Conditioning (VROCA))
- ❖ Conditioned Play Audiometry (CPA)
- ❖ Word recognition testing with materials appropriate for different language levels
- ❖ Pure tone audiometry including air-conduction testing with circumaural and insert earphones and bone conducting testing. The limits of air-conduction testing must meet or exceed 110dBHL
- ❖ Acoustic immittance testing, including high-frequency probe tone tympanometry and acoustic reflex testing
- ❖ Otoacoustic Emission screening (either TEOAE and/or DPOAE)
- ❖ Otoscopy (to ensure that there are no contraindications to placing an earphone or probe in the ear canal as well as to visually inspect for obvious structural abnormalities of the pinna and/or ear canal)

Level Two: Serve children birth to 3 years of age. Audiology services at these facilities include nonsedated ABR testing in addition to other traditional pediatric test procedures

- ❖ Auditory evoked response threshold testing using frequency-specific signals by air and bone conduction (in addition, may include ASSR measures) without medically monitored sedation
- ❖ Testing in a calibrated soundfield
- ❖ Visual Reinforcement Audiometry (VRA) (in addition, may also include Tangible Reinforcement Operant Conditioning (TROCA) and/or Visually Reinforced Operant Conditioning (VROCA))
- ❖ Conditioned Play Audiometry (CPA)
- ❖ Word recognition testing with materials appropriate for different language levels
- ❖ Pure tone audiometry including air-conduction testing with circumaural and insert earphones and bone conducting testing. The limits of air-conduction testing must meet or exceed 110dBHL
- ❖ Acoustic immittance testing, including high-frequency probe tone tympanometry and acoustic reflex testing
- ❖ Otoacoustic Emission (OAE) screening (TEOAE and/or DPOAE)
- ❖ Otoscopy (to ensure that there are no contraindications to placing an earphone or probe in the ear canal as well as to visually inspect for obvious structural abnormalities of the pinna and/or ear canal)

Level Three: Serve children 6 months corrected age to 3 years. Audiology services at these facilities include traditional pediatric test procedures including, but not limited to, soundfield testing, play audiometry, tympanometry and otoacoustic emission screening.

- ❖ Procedures for referral for Auditory Brainstem Response (ABR) testing
- ❖ Testing in a calibrated soundfield
- ❖ Visual Reinforcement Audiometry (in addition, may also include Tangible Reinforcement Operant Conditioning (TROCA) and/or Visually Reinforced Operant Conditioning (VROCA))

- ❖ Conditioned Play Audiometry (CPA)
- ❖ Word recognition testing with materials appropriate for different language levels
- ❖ Pure tone audiometry including air-conduction testing with circumaural and insert earphones and bone conducting testing. The limits of air-conduction testing must meet or exceed 110dBHL
- ❖ Acoustic immittance testing, including acoustic reflex testing
- ❖ Otoacoustic emission screening (TEOAE and/or DPOAE)
- ❖ Otoscopy (to ensure that there are no contraindications to placing an earphone or probe in the ear canal as well as to visually inspect for obvious structural abnormalities of the pinna and/or ear canal)

Screening/ (Re)Screening Services: Indicates that this facility is capable of offering initial or repeat screening services for infants who did not have their hearing screened prior to nursery discharge or who did not pass their in-patient screening. Please note that infants who did not pass an ABR screening while in the nursery optimally should be re-screened with an ABR as an outpatient. Infants who do not pass an OAE re-screening as an outpatient, should then be referred for complete ABR studies.

Glossary

Glossary

ABR Evaluation (Diagnostic): Auditory Brainstem Response measure used to predict hearing sensitivity and to assess the integrity of the auditory nerve and auditory brainstem structures. Other terms used include brainstem auditory evoked potential (BAEP, and brainstem auditory evoked response (BAER). Conventional ABR devices generate waveforms that the audiologist then interprets to determine the presence, type and configuration of a hearing loss.

ABR Screening: Computerized screening of the inner ear and auditory brainstem structures. An internal algorithm compares incoming data to a statistical metric in order to internally determine whether a response is present yielding a “pass” or “refer” result.

Acoustic Reflex (Testing)*: (Measurement of) the reflexive contraction of the intra-aural muscles in response to loud sound, dominated by the stapedius muscle in humans.

American Sign Language: ASL is a visual and manual language made up of signs created with the hands, facial expressions, and body posture and movement. ASL conveys ideas, information, and emotion with as much range, complexity, and versatility as spoken languages and is considered to be the essential link to Deaf Culture among the American Deaf community.

Assistive Listening Device (ALD)*: Hearing instrument or class of hearing instruments, usually with a remote microphone for improving signal-to-noise ratio, including FM system, personal amplifiers, telephone amplifiers, television listeners.

Audiological Evaluation (Diagnostic Audiometry)*: Measurement of hearing to determine the nature and degree of hearing loss.

Audiologist*: Healthcare professional who is credentialed in the practice of audiology to provide a comprehensive array of services related to prevention, evaluation and rehabilitation of hearing loss and its associated communication disorders.

Auditory Nerve*: Cranial Nerve VIII, consisting of a vestibular and cochlear branch.

Auditory Neuropathy: A condition in which patients demonstrate normal otoacoustic emissions (suggesting normal outer hair cell function of the cochlea) and absent or grossly abnormal ABRs (suggesting a neural disorder).

Auditory Steady State Response (ASSR): Auditory Steady State Response (ASSR) is an objective test used for evaluation of hearing ability in children too young for traditional audiometric testing. The results obtained from ASSR testing can be used to estimate the behavioral pure-tone audiogram. Often, testing is performed under sedation or in natural sleep if the person is under 6 months of age. Results are obtained by measuring brain activity while the person listens to tones of varying frequency (pitch) and intensity (loudness). The brain activity is recorded using electrodes taped on the forehead and behind each ear. The results are detected objectively using statistical formulas that determine the presence or absence of a true response. Threshold is determined as the lowest level at each frequency at which a response is present.

Bone Anchored Hearing Aid (BAHA)*: Surgically implanted bone-conduction receiver that interfaces with an external amplifier, designed to provide amplification for those with intractable middle ear disorders.

Bone Conduction: The transmission of sound through the bones of the skull to the inner ear. Bone conduction is completed using a bone oscillator (vibrator) that is placed on the mastoid bone behind the ear or on the forehead.

Central Auditory Processing Disorder (CAPD)*: Disorder in function of central auditory structures, characterized by impaired ability of the central auditory nervous system to manipulate and use acoustic signals, including difficulty understanding speech in noise and localizing sounds. Individuals with CAPD have difficulty following spoken instructions and usually show other language-learning problems even though the inner ear is functioning normally.

Click**: A rapid onset, short duration, broad-band sound produced by delivering an electrical pulse to a transducer.

Cochlea*: Auditory portion of the inner ear, consisting of fluid-filled membranous channels within a spiral canal around a central core.

Cochlear Implant*: Device that enables persons with profound hearing loss to perceive sound, consisting of an electrode array surgically implanted in the cochlea, which delivers electrical signals to the auditory nerve and an external amplifier, which activates the electrode.

Cochlear Implant Mapping*: Representation of the threshold and suprathreshold parameters for each electrode or electrode combination in an individual cochlear implant user's speech-coding program.

Conductive Hearing Loss*: Reduction in hearing sensitivity, despite normal cochlear function, due to impaired sound transmission through the external auditory meatus, tympanic membrane and ossicular chain.

Conscious Sedation*: Sedated state wherein the patient retains protective reflexes and breathes independently commonly attained with chloral hydrate.

Desired Sensation Level* (DSL): Number of decibels above behavioral threshold required to amplify the long-term speech spectrum to a prescribed level across the frequency-range.

Distortion Product Otoacoustic Emission (DPOAE): Refers to a computerized screening of the outer hair cells in the cochlea. Two tones are presented into the baby's ear via a probe which is placed at the opening of the ear canal. A small microphone is also in the probe which measures the echo that is returned from the baby's ear in response to the presentation of the two tones.

DSL Prescriptive Procedure*: Method of choosing gain and frequency response of a hearing aid so that the long-term spectrum of speech is amplified to the desired sensation levels, estimated across the frequency range from audiometric thresholds.

Earmold*: Coupler formed to fit into the auricle that channels sound from the earhook of a hearing aid into the ear canal.

External Auditory Canal Atresia (aural atresia): Absence of the opening to the external auditory meatus, usually with abnormalities of the outer ear and middle ear space.

Genetic Counseling***: The educational process that helps individuals, couples, or families to understand genetic information and issues that may have an impact on them. It helps them comprehend the diagnosis, prognosis, recurrence risks and reproductive choices to make the best possible adjustment to the condition.

Hearing Aid*: Any electronic device designed to amplify and deliver sound to the ear, consisting of a microphone, amplifier, and receiver.

Hearing Aid Dispenser: A hearing aid dispenser is someone who is licensed by the state to measure hearing and to fit and sell hearing aids.

Hearing Aid-Analog*: Amplification device that uses conventional, continuously varying signal processing.

Hearing Aid-Bone Conduction*: Hearing aid in which amplified signal is delivered to a bone vibrator placed on the mastoid, thereby bypassing the middle ear and stimulating the cochlea directly.

Hearing Aid-Digital*: Hearing aid that processes a signal digitally.

Hearing Aid-Vibrotactile*: Device designed for profound hearing loss in which acoustic energy is converted to vibratory energy and delivered to the skin.

Hearing Screening (Identification Audiometry)*: Testing designed to screen the hearing of large numbers of individuals, such as neonates and school age children, with the goal of identifying those who need more comprehensive audiologic assessment.

Insert Earphone*: Earphone whose transducer is connected to the ear through a tube leading to an expandable cuff that is inserted into the external auditory meatus.

Mixed Hearing Loss*: Hearing loss with both a conductive and a sensorineural component.

Otitis Media*: Inflammation of the middle ear resulting predominantly from Eustachian tube dysfunction.

Otolaryngologist (ENT Physician)*: Physician specializing in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the ear nose and throat, including diseases of related structures of the head and neck.

Otoscope*: A speculumlike instrument for visual examination of the external auditory meatus, external auditory canal and tympanic membrane.

Otoscopy*: Inspection of the external auditory meatus and tympanic membrane with an otoscope.

Otoscopy, Pneumatic*: Inspection of the motility of the tympanic membrane with an otoscope capable of varying air pressure in the external auditory meatus.

Pass: A “pass” result on a hearing screening suggests that hearing is adequate for normal speech and language development.

Pediatric Audiology*: Audiology subspecialty devoted to the study, evaluation and treatment of hearing disorders in children.

Play Audiometry*: Behavioral method of hearing assessment of young children in which the correct identification of a signal presentation is rewarded with the opportunity to engage in any of several play oriented activities.

Pure Tone Audiometry*: Measurement of hearing sensitivity threshold to pure tone stimuli by air and bone conduction.

Real Ear Measurement: A test technique used to measure the sound levels in the ear canal produced by a hearing aid which is accomplished by placing a probe microphone in the ear canal alongside the hearing aid.

Real Ear to Coupler Difference (RECD): The difference, in decibels and across frequencies, between the response of a hearing aid measured in a real ear versus a standard coupler. The RECD is a measure that allows the audiologist to accurately specify the sound levels delivered to the ears of infants and young children.

Refer: A refer result on a hearing screening indicates that further evaluation is needed determine whether or not a hearing loss is present in either ear.

Risk Indicator (Risk Factor)*: Health, environmental and lifestyle factors that enhance the likelihood of having or developing a specific disease or disorder. In regards to universal hearing screening, Risk Indicator refers to any factor of the baby's health history that places them at risk for hearing loss.

Sensorineural Hearing Loss*: Cochlear or retrocochlear loss in hearing sensitivity due to disorders involving the cochlea and/or the auditory nerve fibers of Cranial Nerve VIII.

Sign Language Interpreters (Qualified): Sign Language/spoken English interpreters are highly skilled professionals. They must be able to listen to another person's words, inflections and intent and simultaneously render them into the visual language of signs using the mode of communication preferred by the Deaf consumer. The interpreter must also be able to comprehend the signs, inflections and intent of the Deaf consumer and simultaneously speak them in articulate, appropriate English. They must understand the cultures in which they work and apply that knowledge to promote effective cross-cultural communications. The Americans with Disabilities Act requires the provision of qualified interpreters in a variety of settings. It states that "To satisfy this requirement, the interpreter must have the proven ability to effectively communicate..." One important measure of an interpreter's proven ability is professional credentials. Credentials are obtained by taking and passing an assessment of an individual's interpreting skills. The National Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf (RID) provides testing for national certification. Assessments by the National Association for the Deaf (NAD) and other state agencies may also be accepted by employers. (Citation: The Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf website).

Sound field testing* In pediatric audiometry or hearing aid fitting, the determination of hearing sensitivity or speech recognition ability made with signals presented in a sound field through loudspeakers.

Speech Audiometry*: Measurement of the hearing of speech signals; includes measurement of speech awareness, speech reception, word and sentence recognition, sensitized speech processing and dichotic listening.

Speech Language Pathologist: A professional who evaluates and provides treatment for speech, language, cognitive-communication, and swallowing problems of children and adults.

Tangible Reinforcement Operant Response Audiometry (TROCA)*: Audiometric technique that uses a mechanical box from which the child or mentally disabled patient receives reinforcement, usually in the form of candy or cereal, for the correct identification of a signal presentation.

Toneburst**: Signals having a rise time, plateau time, and fall or decay time of sufficient duration to be perceived as having tonal quality.

Transient Evoked Otoacoustic Emission (TEOAE)*: Low-level acoustic echo emitted by the cochlea in response to a click or transient auditory stimulus; related to the integrity and function of the outer hair cells of the cochlea.

Tympanometry*: Procedure used in the assessment of middle ear function in which the immittance (energy flow) of the tympanic membrane and middle ear is measured as air pressure delivered to the ear canal is varied.

Tympanometry (High-Frequency): The development of multi-frequency tympanometry devices has made it possible to record tympanograms across a wide range of probe-tone frequencies. Several studies indicate that the most informative tympanometric recordings in neonates are derived using higher probe tone frequencies (1000 Hz) and are the best predictors of the presence of non-compliant middle ear system.

Vernix*: Fatty substance covering the skin of a fetus (sometimes present in infant's ear canal at the time of newborn hearing screening).

Visual Reinforcement Audiometry (VRA)*: Audiometric technique used in pediatric assessment in which a correct response to signal presentation, such as a head turn toward the speaker, is rewarded by the activation of a light or lighted toy.
